REV. MR. BOYLES RESIGNS

He Will Devote His Time to Religious

At the morning service held at the Randolph Street Baptist Church on Sunday the Rey, I. S. Boyles tendered his resignation as pastor, to take effect August 1st. The resignation will be accepted by the church.

All Mr. Boyles will enter the field of religious journalism, and will give his time to the editing of a Baptist weekly he will start here. His plans are not just known yet, except that he intends to start such a paper. It is probable that the journal will be an enlargement of "The Gospel Weekly," which he has published as a local church paper.

The letter sent by Mr. Boyles to his church is as follows;

"My Dearly Beloved,—Feeling that the lond is calling and leading me to another field of labor that offers opportunities for greater usefulness, I hereby tender my resignation of my present pastorate, to take effect August 1, 1803.

With the Military.

Colonel Anderson is not disposed to enter into a discussion of his plans, but there is a suggestion that the next few days may see the withdrawal of some more of the troops, though it will be some time before all of them will go.

"I may say that the condition is still such that it may be stirred up again," said the Colonel in reply to a question, "Will there be any further removal of troops any time soon?"

"I have made no definite plans as yet." One of the things which leads to the belief that some of the soldiers will be permitted to depart soon is the fact that they were taken off Sevententh Street and Venable Street yesterday, as well as off the cars which run along those streets, and no ill effects ensued. How long this would continue under the same circumstances, however, it is difficult to say: it is not at all apparent that even now the troops, or even a large part of them, could be removed with safety. None went yesterday; practically no furlengths even were granted. With the exceptions stated above there was practically no trouble, and in the face of the removal of the guards and sentinels this is regarded as a very good sign. It remains to be seen whether or not this lossening up of the lines again will be followed by the occurrences which resulted from the first.

At headquarters everything is in good

At headquarters everything is in good trim. A summary court was held yes-terday and several men were fined. They terday and several men were lined. They were charged with being absent without leave. As told in another time, they climbed down a tree near the armoy and escaped for a Sunday night lark. Boldlers are still on dury in Marschester and on some of the suburban lines. River View is still watched, and, as stated above, some of them had to go to Fairmount. The others are taking it easy.

The Strike Itself.

The Strike itself.

So far as the strike itself is concerned, it kept pace with the other things, and developed several interesting and important matters. Chief among these was an attempt to bring the men and the company together again, but a very unsuccessful one. At the instance of a prominent citizon, a committee from the street car men walted on officers of the company, with a view to accompilishing something if possible. Three of them went to see Mr. Huff in the afternoon, but absolutely no results attended their meeting. At the very outset the general manager indicated that he had nothing to say to the men unless they wanted to come back to work on the old terms, making application as individuals. The members of the committee for their part indicated that this was not just what they wanted, and thereupon the conference broke up. This action by Mr. Huff is the best indication yet given of the position of the company with reference to the strike. It has announced its inability to meet the demands of the men, and the men, dissatisfied, have given up their jobs. The company has set out to fill the vacancles, and has in a large measure succeeded in and has in a large measure succeeded in doing so. It will make no terms with its former employes until they come back its former employes until they come back as individuals and apply for positions under the old conditions. If they do so their applications will be considered, if they do not so return the company will continue to augment its gradually growing permanent force until it has gotten all the men it needs, and then there will be no chance for such of the strikers as may desire at that time to return. The doors will have closed: no more men, will have closed: no more men, will

and in the light of this statement is seen the absurdity of sundry widespread rumors that the strike would be settled in a few days and that the company is making overtures to the men. If anything further is needed, however, there is an official denial of these rumors, made vesterday by Mr. Huff. He could not take all the old men back if he would, he would have no place for all of them.

Men are still being taken on permanently, and before long Farley and his staff of professionals can be released from further duty here. About twenty-five or thirty new men were added yesterday. Five of them came from Durham, N. C. Later at night two strikers returned to work, making three in all. Both new ones are Manchester, men. Their names could not be learned. Cars are running on fairly good schedules.

SOLDIERS ESCAPE

Climbed Down Tree from the Armory
Punished and Made Pay for Wire.
Around the tail green tree which lounges against the southwest wall of the Seventleth regiment armory—officially styled "headquarters"—is twined a bristling and formidable line of barbed wire—
a fact which explains several things. It explains why a long string of court-martials were held yesterday; it explains also why certain of the military cannot longer be seen on the streets while their fellows are penned up in the armory.
Sunday night there was concected a brilliantly designed, but rather badly executed conspiracy. The conspiracy had for its object an escape from the armory and a return to the same without attracting the observation of the lynxeyed officers. Two companies were in the plot—a sergeant from Company F
and eight men from Company H. Stiently
they stole to the second story window
and every now and then a shadowy form would pass across the space between tree and building, and suddenly appear below. The tree held out its arms to them, as it were, and all nine climbed through its sheltering leaves.

But on the inside an officer had become conscious that something unusual was on the tapls. To go up stairs and inspect each man to see if he was thero
was manifestly impossible. He bethough him of the "assembly call." and at one carried out the thought. The "assembly call" means that every man who hears it must drop everything else he has on hand and fly to the assembly, and this is what happened Sunday. Down the stairs the solders came tumbling, some of them with their clothes in the hads
(they had gone to bed). Then the officer began calmly to find out who was not there.

you. And they answered him, The Lord bless thee."

Boaz was a rich farmer, and had many employes. A good feeling existed between him and the men he employed, and both were dependent upon each other. The success of Boaz meant the success of his reapers, and there was mutual interest and kindness toward each other, each seeking the other's good.

"Three things are essential in the work of the world," said the doctor, "and they are capital, labor and management." He likened these three to Boaz and his reapers. Boaz felt deep concern for the men he employed. He greeted them with a prayer, and asked God's blessing upon them, and they in replying said, "The Lord bless thee."

Could a picture more beautiful be drawn than Boaz and his workmen? He mingled with his men, prayed for them. There was no strife and disorder among them, and everything worked along in perfect harmony. Would it not be a good thing for the employer and employe of this day to take a deeper interest in each other? Let the workingman give to bis employer his business, and let the employer be in deep sympathy with his men; and where this is in vogue you will find no ill-feeling and bad language, and there would be no labor disputes and strikes.

There are now in England and Wales of 6 co-operative societies with more than 300,000 members and with $14,000,000 capital, any answer of the countries the employer shares part to the profit of the comployer.

tal, and last year's business reached nearly $60,000. In these countries the employe shares part of the profit of the employer.

This has been tried in this country, but dissensions and feuds among the workingmen have prevented its success, owing to bad management of these at the head of the business.

Dr. Johnson exhorted his congregation to follow the example of Boaz and his respers, and let there be no ill-feeling between employer and employe; and when this desired end is reached the wage system will have been selved, business will prosper and strikes will be a thing of the past.

THE MINE WORKERS IN CONVENTION

(By Associated Press.)

WILKESBARRE, P.A., July 12.—The United Mine Workers of the First District met in convention at Plymouth to-day. The sessions will last about a week. There are several important reports to be made, including that of President Mitchell for the year just ended, and including the work during the strike and the efforts of the Concillation Board in the last mount to adjust the prevailing grievances.

Henry Collins, chairman of the Executive Committee, will also make his report. The early session was spent in registering delegates.

Fresident Snee and Solicitor Martin, of the Textille Workers, of Philadelphia, were present, after the afternoon session, and made a plea for funds to aid the striking textile workers of that city, who have been on strike for several weeks. President Snee said that their people expected to win with the minors' support. A resolution was adopted expressing gratitude to the bituminous workers for their loyal support during the late strike.
